EDITORS APPEAL-Last Friday afteroon I and several lady friends con-inded to leave the hot, dusty city of the living, and visit the cool, shady city of the dead-beautiful Elmwood. The street-car we went out on reached the south gate about three o'clock. We started, and soon came to Colonel Le-now's lot, one of the handsomest in the cemetery. It is enclosed with stone, and ornamented with shells and fine shrubbery, and some of the most splendid old oaks I ever saw. Passing beau-tiful lots and fine monuments, we found drawless on Chapel Hill, where my dear husband and children are buried. There we remained some time, cleaning the graves and iot. I hardly think he would get the hading to do. As for "Drayman's" allusion to our watch, and the hour we open our shed, he has little idea who "Cotton Shed?" is; for if he had, and he hauls cotton enough to know much about the sheds, he would hardly speak of eight or nine o'clock as our hour for opening. And if he needs proof of the late hour that we received cotton last winter, we can give it. But to settle that point, I feel certain that every shed man will agree to keep open his doors until six o'clock at night derstood that after that hour no colton will be received. As regards "Drayman's "well known fact or order" that each car-load of cotton must be finished bauling before another is commenced, that is all a humbug. Look at the Charleston yard, for instance, last winter, when cotton was weeks behind in hauling, and so mixed up that parts of the same carload were

days apart in hauling. But that has nothing to do with the point, for there we had tickets of all cotton coming and knew what to expect, and we have always such tickets from all but the Memphis and Ohio railroad; and we were afraid that the other railroads, if they adopted the suggestion of the cotton ex-change and done their own hauling, would have been just as modest and re-ticent of their information as the Mo-bile and Ohio railroad. I have known rejected bales to lose as high as forty pounds, when the cotton was so situated that it could not be easily watched, and the loss was not discovered until the cotton was resuld and reweighed. This, of course, was an extraordinary instance, but ten pounds is very common. I only mention this as one more point worthy of notice. The shed business is one of the most important to the cotton interests of Memphis, but has been heretofore treated as an cuts de matter of little moment. I would raise it to its proper standing, and the only way I know of doing it is to bring factors and shedmen nearer together. Their intershedmen nearer together. All through the cemetry laborers were busy with their shovels and carts, leveling and improving the walks and drives. We also noticed experienced workmen cementing and repairing the Louden and Caldwell vanits, which will add greatly to their appearance when finished. That shows the dead are not forgotten by friends, and while Colonel Lenow is president I am sure the cemetrry will always be cared for as it should be. We walked, admired, and read inscriptions on monuments and tombetones, until the sun was lowering in the western sky, and we were compedied to leave, but promised ourselves to return again at some future time, and then you will hear from me again.

RALEIGH, July 24.—The seekers after health, cooling shades, and pure waters, residing in Memphis, do not apprehend the fact that at their very doors there is a place where abound springs, from which emanate aqua pura, and others invested with real, efficacious, and medicinal properties. And the locality of the place is Raleigh, nine miles only from Memphis, accessible by railroad and by private conveyance. It is not our pur-pose to present amplified views respect-ing the healing properties of the water here, nor to recite the names of persons who have been cured, or benefited by their use; but personal observation and actual experience give assurance that in many aiments the waters have been successfully applied. Diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and urinary passages; stomachic and intestinal indigestion, and irregularities of the bowels, whether proceeding from costiveness or laxitiveness, have found in most cases ready corrections in the use of these waters. A number of the bankers, merchants and business men and families of Memphis are here, and we have yet to hear a single disap-pointment expressed in reference to the springs. The trains on the Louisville railroad make connections with the Rateigh road dully at forty minutes after four o'clock in the afternoon going out, and at eight in the morning returning, so that persons can leave the city after ordinary business hours and return at eight o'clock next morning. We have been sojourning here many weeks, and have received much kindness at the hands of residents, and especially from Colonel James M. Coleman, the mayor of the town. B. C. D. SMOKERS will always be certain of SMOKERS will always be certain of fine, unadulterated, and strictly clean cigars, by buying only those made by D. ON THE RIVER

The Host Delightint Mode of Traveling in the World-Captain Zeigler and His Experiences-The Crops, Etc.

From an Occasional Correspondent. STEAMER CITY OF CHESTER (above Cape Girardeau), July 25, 1874.—
As I write, at half-past six in the evening, the weather is intensely warm, and but for the breeze which fans us so dallentfully it would be intolerable. I delightfully, it would be intolerable.
can well imagine how it is in Memphis
for with the ordinary—or perhaps enfru ordinary—heat of the season, you ar waxing into a far more than ordinarily waxing into a far more than ordinarily heated political campaign, while I am ea route for the ecoler and more placid and quiet region that embraces the northwestern State and Terrritory of the Union—Oregon and Washington. On Thursday evening, bidding adieu to many friends in Memphis, including our friend Captain Ad Storm, down at the elevator, I came aboard this good steamer, and at five o'clock she was "riding the muddy waters like a thing of life," er, and at five o'clock she was "riding the muddy waters like a thing of life," and two other Mississippians (and Panolians) besides rayeelf, and a Memphian and family, (Mr. Gale, of Joyner, Lemon & Gale) besides a goodly number of other passengers, on board. The beautiful craft fairly under way, the warm weather was speedly left far behind, and we experienced and enjoyed a most delightful breeze. In the cool of the evening, Captain Zeigler, the skillful and good-natured master of the steamer, sat with us out on the guards and gave us several interesting items of and gave us several interesting items of his experience on the river, and o especially, a very amusing one, of the war times, which I may write out here after, when there is not such pressing demands on your columns for political purposes. But the captain and his chief clerk, Mr. Charles Quesnel, I can fully agree with your river reporter in indorsing as experienced officers and pleasant and obliging gentlemen. The nights have been beautifully bright and calm and the weather pleasant, except being rather warm, but even this one does not find as unbearable on the river as on land, for there is nearly always a breeze stirring, and especially when the boat is in motion. The corn along the rive seems to be not merely good, but splen seems to be not merely good, but spien-did, magnificent, and there has been a very fine wheat crop barvested, so there is no scarcity of bread to be appre-hended, and our people who are buying corn down in Mississippi, where they go it rather strong on cotion, may hold up a little under an unmistakable assurance that corn and indeed all breadstuffs are that corn, and indeed all breadstuffs, are bound to come down. Let those who have sell, and those who have to buy, wait. This is good advice. The river is quite low, and the Chester was compelied to leave pine hundred sacks of wheat at one landing above Cape Girardeau because the water was too low to get to it. To-morrow morning we are due in St. Louis, where I (and my party) will tarry two days, and thei "westward, ho!"

N. B. Mighty pleasant. No mosqui- COLLIERVILLE.

COLLIERVILLE, July 27 .- In traveling over our congressional district I have taken a good deal of pains to escertain the condition of the country, both in an agricultural and political sense, and feel satisfied that in Fayette and Hardeman counties the corn crop is greatly lojured by the drouth which has prevailed in these counties during the last eight weeks. In some localities rains have been anundant, and the crops of every kind are quite abundant; but the counties above mentioned will not yield over a half crop of corn. Cotton, potatoes and fruit are looking as well, if not bet-ter than usual. I found the people in Hardeman considerably excited over lowever, are so greatly in the majority that the election, go as it may, will give satisfaction, so your party need not be uneasy about that quarter. I found, both in Fayette and Hardeman both in Fayette and Hardeman counties, a strong feeling for General Marcus J. Wright for governor. The general seems to have great strength among the country people, and is decidedly the most prominent aspirant in Tennessee for this office. I find the district somewhat divided on the congressional race. In Exacts country some acceptance of the recommendation of the congressional race. In Fayette county some favor the nom-ination of Colonel Tom Avery, other T. C. Lowe, Esq., while Hon. Joseph R Mosby has many friends. Who will be the standard-bearer remains to set the standard-bearer remains to be settled, but whoever he may be the people express determination to "put him through." Poor old Barbour has played out. The people elected him expecting much good to result therefrom. He has fell short of the expectations of everybody, and even disarcointed the agreement.
